

Halloween sites

by Paul Turner

Black cat mews Pooky and winks at the twilight,
Souls upright in hoops, long trains waft to an ancient site.

Small fires ring the harvest grounds, farmers clutch about.

In the city, pumpkins spew and glare in the street,
Waifs chant of soul cakes, await the morrow's feast.